USACE continues construction on energy-efficient headquarters

WIESBADEN, Germany – From its earliest use as Fliegerhorst (air base) Wiesbaden, a German military kaserne, to the future headquarters for U.S. Army Europe, Wiesbaden Army Airfield has operated as an airfield for nearly a century.

Now, the pre-World War II airfield is transforming into a base that more closely resembles an eco-friendly college campus designed to meet the modern needs of the Army. ... Read More

Eco-friendly neighborhood unveiled in Ansbach

KATTERBACH, Germany -- Soldiers, leaders and civilian employees of 12th Combat Aviation Brigade and U.S. Army Garrison Ansbach celebrated the grand opening of the Urlas family housing area June 14.

The Urlas project began in 2008 and came to fruition through the partnership of USAG Ansbach, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and members of the surrounding German communities. ... Read More

West Point cadet displays talent during USACE internship

WIESBADEN, Germany - A gifted football player aiming for a career in engineering sounds like another Everett Kischer in the making.

"Am I good? I'll leave that for everyone else to decide."

Like the Iowa State Hall of Famer and former B-29 flight engineer, Cadet Max Jenkins will enter his final year at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point with his sights set on a career in engineering.

"I always had an interest in engineering " not only in the technical, but also the business side of things. I'm trying to get involved in as many things as possible," Jenkins said, who is majoring in Engineering Management. "I had no idea what I wanted to do. I wanted to be a professional ball player, but once that ran its course I knew I had to choose a career."
